A ONE MAN 'TOUR DE FORCE' DEPICTING ARTIST ALBERT OEHLEN STRUGGLING WITH A PAINTING AND THE MEANING OF HIS CREATION.

"Watching PAINTER I was bowled over and challenged in a way I love. Ben Becker and the filmmakers manage to infiltrate the impossible dream world. I was completely taken in and wanted to stay there." CHARLOTTE RAMPLING

"if you imagine a paintbrush as a motorcycle this film is the sequel and conclusion of easy rider"

ALBERT OEHLEN and OLIVER HIRSCHBIEGEL

THE PROJECT

Under the direction of legendary director OLIVER HIRSCHBIEGEL ('Downfall' / 'Der Untergang'), Actor BEN BECKER (Key Credits) on screen impersonates the famous contemporary painter ALBERT OEHLER and re-creates a painting that Oehler himself and in parallel is creating step by step in the background, with the actor improvising the process in front of the camera. The finished on-screen painting is an original 'Oehler' on which the artist himself never laid hands. The off screen blueprint painting was destroyed after principal shooting had finished.

Originally planned to be a performative statement the projects developed into a fully fledged feature film of 92 minutes, crossing formal boundaries and questioning the meaning of the creative process and the struggle for authenticity on various levels.

THE PAINTER follows the artist/actor as he is struggling and suffering along this process with us watching in joyful despair and what might happen next until the white canvas has turned into a finished painting.

The outcome is a one-man rollercoaster that appears to be a documentary but in fact is a staged and guided improvisation with the 'real' process happening behind the camera. THE PAINTER is a constant flow of the artist's journey with elements of farce and comedy topped with emotional moments of truth....in front of and behind the camera and leaving it up to us to decide what is real and/or authentic.

Being one of the most significant, contemporary painters, Albert Oehler's approach is complete refusal of the common art circus. In its own way the Film reflects this very stance.

Likewise, it questions the purpose of obsolete thinking patterns created by white straight male artists of a certain age that have dominated the art world for centuries. It explores the idea of authenticity & original and subsequently the concept of copyright and ownership which manifests the very basis of capitalism.

It is up to us, the audience to decipher the THE PAINTER'S amalgam of true and false / silly and serious, real and surreal.

Oliver Hirschbiegel and Albert Oehler are longtime friends and both studied at the 'Hochschule der Bildenden Künste Hamburg' with 'The Painter' being their first artistic collaboration in a long while.

THE DIRECTOR

OLIVER HIRSCHBIEGEL

OLIVER HIRSCHBIEGEL, born December 29, 1957, in Hamburg, went to sea as a scullion after finishing Waldorf school. On his return, he studied painting and graphic at Hamburg's Hochschule der bildenden Künste Hamburg but soon turned more and more to the departments of photography, video, and film; did installation art and performances, and finally switched to film directing. After directing various successful Television Projects Hirschbiegel made his feature debut on the movie screen in 2001. The thriller "The Experiment" ("Das Experiment") became a box office hit at home and abroad, won four German film awards (Lola).

After the one-person chamber play "My Last Film", ("Mein letzter Film" 2002), starring Hannelore Elsner, Hirschbiegel made his international breakthrough in 2004 with "Downfall" ("Der Untergang" 2004) about the final hours in Hitler's Führerbunker based on the book by Joachim Fest and produced by legendary German producer Bernd Eichinger. Despite mixed reviews at home "Downfall" sold more than 4.6 million cinema tickets and premiered to standing ovations in a Gala Screening at the Toronto Film Festival before being sold all around the world and, up to date, being the highest grossing German language Film internationally since the advent of Television.

Riding on the success of "Downfall", Hirschbiegel directed "Just an Ordinary Jew" (2005), followed the British-Irish co-production "Five Minutes of Heaven" (2009) about a member of the Protestant UVF militia – played by Liam Neeson, which premiered at the Sundance Film Festival and won the BAFTA award for best screenplay among others.

After the TV miniseries "Borgia" (2011), Hirschbiegel directed the biopic "Diana" (2013), starring Naomi Watts as the later Princess of Wales and then returned to Germany for his next feature film: "13 Minutes" ("Elser" 2015) which recounts the true story of German resistance fighter Georg Elser, who attempted to kill Adolf Hitler in 1939 and premiered at the Berlin Film Festival as a Berlinale Special.

THE ARTIST

ALBERT OEHLER

ALBERT OEHLER was born in Krefeld, Germany in 1954. He attended the Hochschule für Bildende Künste in Hamburg, where he studied under Sigmar Polke until 1981.

During the early stages of his career, Oehler's artistic inclinations and thematic interests were diverse, ranging from music to painting. Neo-Expressionism became the prevailing aesthetic in the 1980s, inspiring him to combine abstract and figurative elements throughout his paintings. He established a close friendship with German artist Martin Kippenberger and dedicated himself completely to abstract painting.

As early as a decade ago, Oehler set up a studio in a tower of the city walls of Segovia, where he began to work on computer generated images that would become integral to his paintings. Oehler's spatially complex works use the collision of figuration and abstraction as a strong reminder of the multiple forces involved in the resurgence of painting at the latter part of the 20th century.

Albert Oehler has exhibited extensively throughout the United States and Europe. Recent solo exhibitions of his work have been held in institutions such as the Palazzo Grassi in Venice in 2018, The Cleveland Museum of Art and Guggenheim Bilbao in 2016, The New Museum in 2015, Museo di Capodimonte in Naples, Italy and the Musée d' Art Moderne de la Ville de Paris in 2009. He has also participated in exhibitions in major institutions such as the Musée Cantonal Des Beaux Arts in Lausanne, the Renaissance Society in Chicago and at the Kunsthalle in Basel. Oehler's show at MOCA Miami in 2005 marked his first major solo exhibition at a museum in the United States. In 2009 Taschen published an oversized artist's monograph as part of its XL series that covers the entire scope of Oehler's oeuvre. Albert Oehler lives and works in Switzerland.

The Art world considers Albert Oehler as part of the 'New Wilds' and as protagonist of Neo-Expressionism.
