PAUSE

Baptiste Gilliéron • André Wilms • Julia Faure

A film by Mathieu Urfer
SYNOPSIS

Sami, a laid-back songwriter, is shocked when Julia, a brilliant lawyer with whom he’s been living for the last four years, decides to put their relationship on hold. Coached by his old friend Fernand, an alcoholic country musician living in a nursing home for the elderly, he tries to achieve the impossible to prove to her she’s the only woman for him.

MATHIEU URFER INTERVIEW

WHY DID YOU WANT TO MAKE A ROMANTIC COMEDY FOR YOUR FIRST FEATURE FILM?

At first, I just wanted to tell a couple’s life story, but the classic structure of a romantic comedy or, more specifically, the comedy of remarriage, brought me to develop a scheme and build a plotline. I used the scheme as a template and gradually added all elements I was interested in.

ARE THERE ANY AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL ELEMENTS IN YOUR STORY?

Of course. At first, I wanted to express the feeling of being (left) alone. I’m very fascinated by bad-ending love stories, which was the case of all my stories. Break-ups fascinate me in real life as well as in fiction. For PAUSE, I wanted to talk about this typical musician’s fantasy which makes us believe it’s possible to heal broken hearts with music. This means relationship problems could be solved thanks to Art in an ideal world. So, if Sami’s songs would be good enough, he could simply win Julia back. Since I’ve been playing music for several years now, the story is largely based on biographical elements which helped me write the movie.

TELL US ABOUT YOUR SCREENWRITING.

I have a little notebook, where I put down scenes from everyday life, out of the ordinary things that happen to me or things I hear about; I insert them into a narrative structure and then I shuffle them around, arrange and make improvements on them.

HOW DID YOU CHOOSE YOUR ACTORS SAMI (BAPTISTE GILLIÉRON) AND JULIA (JULIA FAURE)?

The toughest part was to find the main actor who would be able to carry the whole story. He appears in every scene, and I knew the movie would become a portrait of him. I took a lot of decisions in regards to the character. It was only after I found him that I began looking for who would be playing Julia.
The actresses had their casting audition in the presence of Baptiste. I finally chose Julia Faure whom I had previously seen in Philippe Garrel’s WILD INNOCENCE. This movie was a great inspiration (and I even borrowed the quote: “You look stunning in this light”). She’s a great actress, very funny without overdoing it and we quickly came to a mutual understanding on how Julia’s character would be played.

BAPTISTE GILLIÉRON IS REALLY REVEALING HIMSELF IN HIS VERY FIRST MAIN ROLE ON THE BIG SCREEN.
I was very happy to work with someone from my region (Canton of Vaud) and who was a beginner like me. We shared the same experience, since it was his first main feature as well. I was very happy to work with him, not only because he’s a very talented actor, but also because he’s unknown. Audiences don’t have any representation of him in their minds before seeing him playing his part.

WHY DID YOU WANT TO WORK WITH ANDRÉ WILMS?
I love his rough appearance. I also wished to collaborate with cinematographer Timo Salminen, who worked many times with Finnish director Aki Kaurismäki, as did André Wilms; they are like a link to a different world I appreciate very much.

THE LIGHTNING AND SETTINGS GIVE THE MOVIE A RETRO-STYLE; THE SKATED COLORS AND OLD OBJECTS SEEM AS IF SAMI CAN’T REALLY FIT INTO OUR MODERN SOCIETY.
Sami’s passion for old objects was already written in the script, but it has been enhanced by Timo Salminen’s beautiful cinematography work. For him, it’s stupid to show trendy things or new technology which might look outdated only a few months after being shot. Not only is it more beautiful to shoot old-fashioned things such as old cars, but it also means you can’t make out the exact time period. In PAUSE, other than the use of modern cell phones, you can’t tell when the story takes exactly place. This also makes the story seem a little bit like a fairy tale.
DID YOU CHOOSE BAPTISTE GILLIÉRON BECAUSE OF HIS SINGING ABILITIES?
I didn’t choose him because of his vocal talents at all; it’s only after I chose him for his performance as an actor that I tested his vocal capabilities. Until the first shooting day, we didn’t know who would finally sing: him, myself or a voice-over. I put some pressure on him, he sang along and he did great! All songs had been written beforehand and were performed live on set. The songs are found in the script at the right place at the right time; they were an essential part of the storyline. I didn’t want to use any non-diegetic music.

HOW DO YOU FEEL ABOUT YOUR MOVIE BEING SHOWN ON PIAZZA GRANDE AT THE LOCARNO FILM FESTIVAL?
I’m very proud, since my very first, ROMANCE MAYONNAISE, a film school short movie with a small budget of 500 CHF was already selected at this same festival back in 2004. The story was very much alike PAUSE’s beginning, but its ending was more brutal. I started working on this long feature right after the screening back then, so I’m very happy it can finally be shown on Piazza Grande!

Interview done by Carine Bernasconi on July, 11th 2014
Filmmaker and musician, Mathieu Urfer got his masters in screenwriting at the Ecole Cantonale d'Art in Lausanne. He wrote scripts for several drama series for Radio Télévision Suisse, before making his first feature film, Pause, for which he also composed most of the original score. He is currently working on his second feature film.
