LONG SYNOPSIS

Sam (11), an engaging boy who is smart and small for his age, is spending his summer holiday on the island Terschelling together with his father, mother and brother Jorre. Sam’s holiday has never started so strange, because already on the first day his mother is lying in bed with migraine and Jorre breaks his leg. Jorre is blaming Sam, because he dug the pit Jorre fell into. But according to their father, it is just an unfortunate coincidence and they must go to the doctor immediately.

This is how Sam meets the self-willed Tess (11), the daughter of the doctor’s assistant. Sam becomes fascinated by this lively girl, who just seems to have the same wonderful view of the world like himself. Sam often does not feel understood by his parents, and certainly not by Jorre, but with Tess everything is different. He soon finds out that Tess is working on a mysterious mission. Sam does not know exactly what she is planning, but it is obvious that she needs his help.

During the sunny days and the remarkable encounters that follow, Sam creates a special bond with Tess. Moreover, he finds out that he is in love with her. When he returns home to the cottage, he does not want to tell his parents and brother. In addition, Sam has something else that he prefers to keep for himself; his self-conceived “aloneness training”. Recently the thought of death - and especially the fact that he will be left alone as the youngest - is getting stronger and stronger. That is why he gives himself the assignment to be alone - between the moments with his family and with Tess. Every day a little longer. At first, this is easy for him but it gets harder as he increasingly starts to appreciate the moments with his family. Also, the encounters with Tess become very important to him.

In the meantime, Tess continues to involve him in her wondrous/ mysterious plan, but every time he comes too close, she pushes him away. Sam is going crazy about it. Until he finally discovers what Tess is up to; she wants to get in touch with her father, whom she never met. Her father Hugo does not know that he has a daughter. Tess found out about him and lured him and his girlfriend to the island. During this all-deciding week, she must decide whether she wants him as a father, without her mother knowing. And Sam has to help her to get as close to him as possible and see if Tess wants to make herself known as his daughter.
But then everything goes wrong. During an emotional crisis, Tess decides that she no longer wants a father. Again, she turns her back on Sam and it seems to break their bond for good. That hurts Sam a lot. Once more, he decides to withdraw to his aloneness training which results in the most fearful moment of his life. He gets stuck in the mudflats while the water rises very quickly. At the last second, he is rescued by the old beachcomber of the island. After he recovers, Sam gains new insights into ideas about death, but especially about life while talking to the old man.

On the second last day of his holiday, Sam takes fate into his own hands. Now that he recognizes the value of family more than ever, he decides to reveal Tess' big secret, contrary to her will. Just before Tess' father is leaving the island, Sam tells him the truth. For a moment Sam feels that he has really gone too far and that he will lose Tess forever. In the end though, everything turns out better than he could have ever imagined. Even though he did his best at being alone during this bizarre week, he unintentionally brought everyone closer together. Tess has finally met her father. And Sam got Tess. Everything that Sam has experienced in this adventurous holiday taught him to fully embrace life from now on.
DIRECTOR’S NOTE

“Everything still seemed so simple when I was young. However, the older I got, the more I discovered that the world was more complicated than I had originally thought. Gradually, as it happens to everybody sooner or later, I was confronted with the ‘more serious’ things in life. I came to discover that life is transitory and that even loving relationships that you think will last forever do not always stand the test of time. And that things sometimes turn out very differently from how you expected. When I was in my twenties, I lost my mother, which was another hard confirmation that nothing in life is certain. However, it also made me realize how resilient I actually am, and this drastic event led me to start living my life even more intensely.

Three years ago, when I first read the book MY PARTICULARLY PECULIAR WEEK WITH TESS by Anna Woltz, I knew immediately that this was the story for my first feature film. I find it to be a heart-warming narrative with a wonderful mix of excitement, emotion and humour. It’s no surprise that it is a book that has many avid readers in many countries. From all kinds of perspectives, the story is close to my heart and I recognise a lot of myself in Sam, the 10-year old main character. It was a real challenge to translate the book into a film script and, even more, to make the story my own. I believe that we have succeeded – mostly through the brilliant work of scriptwriter Laura van Dijk - in writing a layered and accessible film script. I believe that the film’s different levels will appeal to a wide audience, to young and old alike. And to both boys and girls.

The story is a realistic one, with characters that are sometimes a little unreal but that never turn into caricatures. I wanted to create very human characters; multi-facetted individuals that you learn to love and identify with. Almost all the characters are a bit wayward. That was already the case in the book but we have accentuated this even more here and there. We as human beings all have our own crazy traits, and I think, it is wonderful and important to use this film to show that this is actually a nice thing which also makes each person unique. It is actually completely normal to be strange.

In my films, I strive for a certain authenticity, a feeling of originality, and as far as possible, try to show the way a child looks at/perceives the world. I also want to show the magnificence of the landscape and to let people feel that Sam is part of a greater whole. At some point we will float in the air above him to observe him wandering across the island. Then again, we will return to the ground and the beauty of nature and in a close-up understand how he perceives the little things."

(Steven Wouterlood)
"For years now, we have enjoyed a close and very pleasant working relationship with director Steven Wouterlood, a partnership that has already led to a number of great films such as the virtual reality film SUPERSTAR VR (premiere Cinekid, IDFA, official selection Paris Courts Devant) and the two films for young people ANYTHING GOES (2014) and KING’S DAY (2015). These last two films went on an impressive world tour and have won prestigious awards. These included the International Emmy ® Kids Award, the TIFF Kids Award (twice), the Cinekid Award, and many more.

Steven introduced us to the book MY PARTICULARLY PECULIAR WEEK WITH TESS by Anna Woltz. It is an intelligent and multi-layered story that corresponds with the ambitions of both Steven and BIND. We immediately realized that this is the perfect story for Steven’s debut feature film. Sam, the principal character, learns about the value of family and friendship, and the film also covers such themes as ‘loss’ and ‘loneliness’. Striking the right balance between these themes makes this film a tale with relevance; it also has a light tone that makes it very suitable as a family film.

It was a logical step to ask screenwriter Laura van Dijk to join this project. She has a special talent for creating authentic and clear-cut characters that give the film rich colours. We have all very much fallen in love with these wayward characters. During the film’s development, we were repeatedly surprised by the cheerful, funny and sensitive scenes that she has created.”

His first feature as a producer was SHOUF SHOUF HABIBI! (HUSH HUSH BABY), which became a Dutch box-office surprise of 2004, famous for its light comic approach to the European integration topic. The film was selected for Panorama Berlinale 2004 and later on sold to over 40 countries. Anna Woltz (b. London, 29 December 1981) is a Dutch writer. She has written twenty-one books for young readers. Some of her books are adventurous stories for ten-year-olds, others are challenging young adult novels. Her books have been translated into thirteen languages (English, German, French, Slovenian, Serbian, Polish, Latvian, Estonian, Norwegian, Danish, Hungarian, Japanese and Taiwanese) and have won many prizes.

Woltz’s books are loved by both children and adults. Children enjoy the exciting, funny and sometimes crazy adventures and the lovable characters. Adults have praised Woltz for her beautiful language, psychological depth and fresh, humorous narrative voice.

Themes that are particularly close to Woltz’s heart are family relationships, growing up and the question all people have to face sooner or later: how am I going to do this – this amazing and complicated thing called life? Quite a few of her books are about young characters who discover their parents are no different from all other human beings: sometimes they make mistakes and sometimes they have no clue what to do. Part of growing up is about accepting this.
